

Partner with the world's only transdisciplinary community-supported journal in local and regional food systems research

Why are we a partner of JAFSCD? It's simple. The Center for Environmental Farming Systems shares the same goals as JAFSCD in promoting research-based strategies that simultaneously minimize food insecurity and farm loss and maximize community resilience.

— Dr. Nancy Creamer, Director (ret.), Center for Environmental Farming Systems, North Carolina State University, USA

10 Reasons to become a JAFSCD Partner

- 1 Gold Open Access publishing: The JAFSCD article publishing charge (APC) of US$750 is automatically waived for authors from your institution and any member organizations, thus increasing your value proposition.
- 2 Editorial assistance for non-Native English researchers, increasing your stakeholders' chances of a successful review.
- 3 Editorial mentors for your emerging researchers who need assistance in preparing their manuscript for submission to JAFSCD (or other journals).
- 4 Opportunity to write a dedicated quarterly column on a topic area of your choosing.
- 5 Voices from the Grassroots: Brief essays by the stakeholder groups your members work with, co-authored by staff or graduate students at your institution and/or member organizations.
- 6 Research, Policy, and Practice Briefs: 1–2-page summaries that can be easily shared or presented to (or even authored by) stakeholder groups.
- 7 Articles are published as soon as they are ready and are promoted in our weekly JAFSCD News Flash, which goes out to over 16,000 contacts around the world.
- 8 Discounts on special issues or special sections on a thematic topic of your choice.
- 9 Free advertising and promotion of events, publications, and job openings.
- 10 Ad hoc editorial support for your program. Our world-class editors are available to work with your in-house staff to copyedit documents before they are published.

Annual Partner Share Fee: US$10,000